2017 The Credit Review Tutorial Program

The Gonzaga Credit Review Tutorial Program is an innovative approach to course failure designed specifically for college-bound students. The tutorial format provides students with the opportunity to concentrate on a single subject coupled with individual instruction and attention.

- The intensive curriculum for each course is structured as a tutorial with a limit of five students per course.
- Classes are two hours in length, providing enough time to enable teachers and students to cover subject matter in depth and to fit instruction to individual need.

Gonzaga students who attended summer review classes in past summers improved their performance the following semester in the next level of the failed subject by an average of one and one-half grades.

Gonzaga students must attend this program for make-up credit. Students with D's are strongly advised to review those courses in the Credit Review Tutorial Program. The summer school grade is used as a factor in computing class rank. These courses may not be taken for first time credit.

Attendance: Because these courses are concentrated, students are required to attend every class. An absence puts the student's credit in jeopardy. Several absences, no matter the reason, may result in dismissal without refund or credit.
